

Democratization Call for Papers

Now included in the Thomson Reuters' Social Sciences Citation Index®

Democratization aims to promote a better understanding of democratization – defined as the way democratic norms, institutions and practices evolve and are disseminated both within and across national and cultural boundaries. While the focus is on democratization viewed as a process, the journal also builds on the enduring interest in democracy itself and its analysis. The emphasis is contemporary and the approach comparative, with the publication of scholarly contributions about those areas where democratization is currently attracting considerable attention world-wide. There is special reference to democratization in the developing world and in post-communist societies, but not to the exclusion of other relevant areas such as North America, Australasia, and the European Union and its member states. The journal aims to encourage debate on the many aspects of democratization that are of interest to policy-makers, administrators and journalists, aid and development personnel, as well as to all those involved in education.

Free access to selected articles

Recently published papers include the following, all of which are free to view here:

The contradictions of democratization by force: the case of Iraq

David Beetham

State-sponsored development, oil and democratization

Mehmet Gurses

Losing 'the Force'? The 'Dark Side' of democratization after Iraq

Laurence Whitehead

Submission guidelines

There is no standard length for articles but 8,000 words (including notes and references) is a useful target. An abstract of up to 200 words should be added during the submission process, along with a minimum of 5 and a maximum of 10 keywords.

All submissions should be made online at the Democratization ScholarOne Manuscripts site: <http://mc.manuscriptcentral.com/fdem>

Editors:

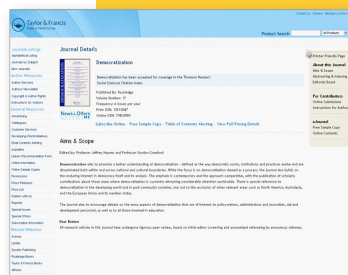

Jeffrey Haynes

London Metropolitan University, UK

Gordon Crawford

University of Leeds, UK

www.tandf.co.uk/journals/democratization

For more information on journal submissions please visit the journal homepage above and click on the 'Instructions for Authors' link.